

Frances G. Burwell

SENIOR ADVISOR

Washington DC

202.419.1420

fburwell@maglobal.com

Frances G. Burwell, Senior Advisor, advises clients on the European Union and US-EU relations.

From 2008-2016, Dr. Burwell served as the Atlantic Council's Vice President for European Union and Special Initiatives and Director of Transatlantic Programs and Studies. She previously led the Program on Transatlantic Relations. Dr. Burwell was also a leading initiator and organizer of the Wroclaw Global Forum in Poland, the Council's flagship European conference. She is currently a Distinguished Fellow with the Atlantic Council's Future Europe Initiative.

Dr. Burwell's research has focused on the digital economy and privacy, US-EU trade and investment, US-EU security cooperation, and EU institutions and processes. A noted commentator on EU issues, Dr. Burwell is the author of numerous policy reports and has recently contributed to The Telegraph, The Hill, C-SPAN, and NPR, among other outlets.

Prior to her time at the Atlantic Council, Dr. Burwell was the Executive Director of the Center for International and Security Studies at the University of Maryland and the founding Executive Director of Women in International Security (WIIS) at the Center for International and Security Studies.

Dr. Burwell holds a BA in Political Science from Mount Holyoke College, an MPhil in International Relations from the University of Oxford, and a PhD in Government and Politics from the University of Maryland.